

Interview with Joana Idiart Davant

The journalist Ainize Madariaga Muthular conducts a wide-ranging interview with the cultural activist Joana Idiart Davant, in a new issue of the Living History series. The interview takes an extensive look back over Idiart Davant's life and career: her childhood in Amenduze; the Second World War and relationship with the Germans; her stay in Paris –she took part in the setting up and development of the Euskal Etxea (Basque House) in Paris–; her return to the Basque Country and her work as coordinator of the Euskaldun Gazteria association and as copy editor for the Gazte journal; her struggle and work in favour of solidarity among women and the right to abort; her participation in setting up the Emazteek Diote cooperative and the Ikastola Ezkia school in Hazparne... Ainize Madariaga Muthular

What is care? An exercise in imagination

The sociologists Alaitz Uriarte Goikoetxea and Maider Barañano Uribarri analyse the discourse existing among agents taking part in the Zestoa Care Ecosystem; specifically, the discourse and ideas revolving around care, underscoring the need to seek shared definitions based on different dimensions and standpoints. Alaitz Uriarte Goikoetxea • Maider Barañano Uribarri
