

WOMEN SUPPRESSED FROM PHILOSOPHY

Prologue

Itsaslore Yarza Lopez, high school teacher of Philosophy and member of the Agora Philosophy Society, presents the course titled Women suppressed from Philosophy. Itsaslore Yarza Lopez

Convergence between Basque thought and feminism

The journalist and member of the Jakin Editorial Board, Idurre Eskisabel Larrañaga, argues that, although Basque thought and feminism have not especially converged thus far, some interesting contributions have been exchanged whenever they have crossed paths. Idurre Eskisabel Larrañaga

Menstruation and the embodied philosophical subject

The teacher of Philosophy of Biology, Arantza Etxeberria Agiriano, argues that woman is a new, different subject in Philosophy –perhaps owing to the fact that they embody this more in their body through menstruation– which addresses their nature and actions. According to Weil, it can be said that only oppression prevents purpose and the capacity to think and philosophize. Arantza Etxeberria Agiriano

Feminist thought in an introduction to Philosophy

The teacher of Philosophy, Agustin Arrieta Urtizberea, provides a range of contributions to feminist thought, with a view to offering an introduction to Philosophy. More specifically, he analyses several issues regarding the organisation and classification of ‘reality’ and the limits between ethics and aesthetics. Agustin Arrieta Urtizberea

Care and neo-liberal governmentality

The PhD student in Political Science, Lore Lujanbio Etxeberria, analyses the feminist debate revolving around the notion of care and highlights the importance of historical perspective. The author scrutinizes the heteropatriarchal mechanisms of essentialization and feminization in terms of their relationship with neo-liberal governmentality. Lore Lujanbio Etxeberria

Epistemic injustices

The PhD student in Philosophy, Irati Zubia Landa, refers to a range of hypotheses about the limited presence of women in Philosophy. Specifically, and starting from the notion of epistemic injustice, she maintains that testimonial and hermeneutical injustices may be closely linked to this. Irati Zubia Landa

Philosophy of care

Maite Arraiza Zabalegi, teacher of Philosophy and feminist militant, reflects from a feminist critical perspective on the key features of the care crisis, the importance of care and the different conceptual approaches to 'care', highlighting some of its main contributions to Philosophy. Maite Arraiza Zabalegi

Simone de Beauvoir: a thought for life

The graduate in Philosophy, Alaitz Aizpuru Joaristi, analyses the thought of Simone de Beauvoir, proposing several keys to its interpretation and highlighting the importance of ageing in her work and the main ideas contained in her book, La vieillesse (1970). Alaitz Aizpuru Joaristi

Hannah Arendt: courage to think

Yolanda Barrios Colodrón, high school teacher of Philosophy and member of the Agora Philosophy Society, provides some details about the identity, biography and key works of Hannah Arendt. Yolanda Barrios Colodrón

Virginia Woolf (1882-1941): trails of thought

Iratxe Retolaza Gutierrez, member of the Emagin association, provides some lines and ways of thought present in the work by the British writer, Virginia Woolf (1882-1941). Iratxe Retolaza Gutierrez

Tractatus critical feminist

Naiara Gago Povedano and Maitane Nerekan Umaran, both high school teachers of Philosophy and members of the Agora Philosophy Society, present the Tractatus critical feminist –commandments for the design of feminist learning and teaching in Philosophy. Naiara Gago Povedano • Maitane Nerekan Umaran

Beauvoir and Arendt: subjects to study

A series of didactic materials is presented in this section for the purpose of studying the Philosophy of Simone de Beauvoir and Hannah Arendt in the Bacallaureate subject History of Philosophy: a text from each author, the epigraphs or subjects to be pursued in each of them, and some exam models. Various authors

NEWS TODAY

This gathers together cultural information focusing on the present from various areas and perspectives. This year we shall be closely following culture and globalization matters. This section draws on various specialists: Maialen Akizu Bidegain and Iñigo Martínez Peña. Various authors